

Paper Making

The use of Bentonite in paper pulp has advantages, including increasing the strength of the paper and increasing its water absorption. Increasing the strength of the paper contributes to its final quality and durability. The presence of bentonite in paper pulp due to the renewable nature of bentonite makes the resulting product better renewable in nature and reduces environmental problems.

